The life, times and personalities of the Shanghai Rugby Football Club. By Simon Drakeford. The Treaty Port of Shanghai was established in 1843. As the 'Model Settlement' grew, thoughts inevitably turned to recreation. In 1839 Britain went to war with Imperial China to defend its right to sell opium to the Chinese. Shanghai was occupied and, at the war's conclusion in 1842, the city became what was known as a 'Treaty Port' with a permanent British garrison and diplomatic and business settlement.
