World of: Lady Carnarvon, the real Downton duchess Fiona Carnarvon talks to Jessica Salter about Christmas traditions at Highclere Castle, the Downton effect and the importance of champagne. When I was five years old, my sister Sarah was four, and Lucy even younger, our mother interviewed a nanny. Sarah and I immediately decided we did not like her. We couldn't see why we needed her and she was bound to tell us what to do. In those days, nannies wore a uniform and, with my mother's help, Nanny chose a purple and white narrow striped dress with a wide belt, teamed with a classic ...
